

Assignment 3: Connectionist Architectures and Ensemble Techniques: Part 4

The network makes decisions by assigning random weights all over the network, then computes the output result based on these weights. It then compares the output result with the training image. The network then computes an error value based on this, then uses backpropagation to minimize the error and update the weights until they are constant.